Summary of the affair RATHGEB

In 1987 Werner RATHGEB had acquired a farm of 40 ha at Rennaz, in the fertile Vaudois Chablais. He invested 8 million CHF for the purchase of the land and the infrastructure of a modern Bio vegetable producing farm. He administered his family enterprise (annual turnover 6 mio of CHF, 40 employees) under the judicial regime of 3 limited incorporations (Bearer shares).

In 1992 Werner RATHGEB remarried with a young Southern Italian woman. This has never been a happy relation, and it ended finally with a blow.

Coming back home from a business trip in the evening of August 22, 2003, Mr. RATHGEB was expected by the Police. On complaint of his wife, assisted by the late Lawyer Paul MARVILLE †, the «Judge » Saverio WERMELINGER forced him by order of August 29th, 2003 to leave his farm instantly. He has been thrown into the street with a small suitcase prepared beforehand by his wife. (Subsequently, he never got condemned for marital violence, because of lack of evidence, since he had not touched his wife). In spite of all his endeavours, he never could recuperate his personal belongings. At the time of this barbarian ejection, Werner RATHGEB had not any longer cohabited with his wife, but was living in an adjoining flat. However, this proximity was hindering the wife to realize the manoeuvres which she practised later on. Among others, she will apply cropping methods contrary to the Bio label instructions. Whereas Werner RATHGEB was in the streets without any resources, his wife Patrizia disposed of two flats and controlled all the assets belonging to her husband. This is demonstrating the absurd nonsense of that ejection.

The «Judge» responsible for the provisional measures, Saverio WERMELINGER allowed to Madame to manage the exploitation of the enterprise – flourishing at the time of the barbarian ejection – although she did not have any agricultural education, nor knowledge of management. That was just done in the interest of the canton of Vaud. Two years later, the business went bankrupt, and in the meantime, the Vaudois «Judges» had manoeuvred to get control of the estate, in order to allow the State of Vaud to acquire land reserves at a cheap price.

To start with, the «Judge» Joël KRIEGER who was perhaps not yet informed about the cantonal strategy to embezzle the estate of RATHGEB ordered Patrizia a prohibition to sell any assets, by order of September 1st, 2003 – although the management of the farm had been entrusted to her.

This prohibition was then disturbing the strategy of the Vaudois Government, wanting to get hold of land. To reach that goal, Joël KRIEGER pronounced subsequently a new order of November 5th 2004, by which he retracted the prohibition of sales of assets, in order to authorize Patrizia RATHGEB the «sale» (one should speak of a donation) in favour of the State of VAUD. Already on June 3rd, 2004 Mr. C. PEGUIRON of the Finance Department VD had presented to Patrizia RATHGEB a purchase offer of land. The order of KRIEGER of August 23rd, 2004 had thus been just a manoeuvre of deterrence. Albeit ejected from his property, W. RATHGEB was still the owner of his farm. For resolving this problem, the «Justice of peace» Carole IFF from the district of Aigle intervened for pronouncing his eviction of the anonymous society on November 16th, 2004.

The bill of sale could then be concluded on February 9th, 2005 to the benefit of the State of Vaud who needed seventeen hectares of land reserves for the future construction of the highway Transchablaisienne H144 between Rennaz VD and les Evouettes VS.

The State of Vaud did acquire that land unbeknown by the real owner, Werner RATHGEB, by transaction of February 9, 2005 at the price of CHF 4./m², whereas the land had been acquired 18 years earlier for the price of CHF 12.80, without taking into account the subsequent infrastructure investments.

Patrizia RATHGEB was thus put in a position to sign the sales bill for that land in favour of the State of Vaud at a sales off price, after having robbed her husband. She had taken advantage of the ejection of her husband, ordered by the president WERMELINGER, for taking control of the Bearers shares, stolen from her husband. For compensating Patrizia RATHGEB for her subjugation to the interests of the State of Vaud, the investigating «Judge» Hervé NICOD (today Prosecutor) in charge of instructing the penal complaint of Werner RATHGEB did not see any action punishable under criminal law in the manoeuvres of the irregular takeover of the Bearers shares and the illegal sale, which is nothing else than a fraud. At first, Patrizia maintained to ignore, where these bearer shares, property of her husband, were located. Then, she stated that she detained them in the quality of «owner» of the society. And still later on, she presented a third version: Werner RATHGEB was said to have thrown them away, and for this reason, she had «picked them up»... The investigating «Judge» swallowed any nonsense.

To finalize the operation, the president Saverio WERMELINGER restored the prohibition of asset sales by order of February 9, 2005...

Patrizia RATHGEB is a thief and the State of Vaud a receiver of stolen goods, an active accomplice in fraud. Once the enterprise was put in bankruptcy, and the State had obtained what it wanted, the Beares shares were handed back to their owner, who has however never seen a single Franc from the sale of his land...

The partners in crime of this property offense were the «Judges» Joël KRIEGER (today cantonal «Judge»), Saverio WERMELINGER (in golden old pension retirement) and the investigating Judge Hervé NICOD (today Prosecutor).

The criminal actions of those Officers of Vaud have been denounced on June 24, 2005 in a detailed form to the federal Prosecutors' Office – yielding no reaction at all! There again, there is nothing to be astonished about, being aware of the records of the Attorney General LAUBER...

Subsequently, Patricia RATHGEB acquired the castle of Rennaz, becoming her residence (a farm was not matching her social ambitions), and no Magistrate whatsoever wanted to recognize the embezzlement of the assets... All the complaints of Werner RATHGEB were simply filed. Later on, one could read in the newspapers that the Lady of the Manor had defrauded a great number of other persons. She was finally condemned to twenty months in prison (24 Heures of February 2th 2012). But it was written nowhere that the Judges had put that Lady in a position to commit those crimes.
